In accordance with CLSI's "Standards Development Policies and Processes" document, and in order to participate on a CLSI committee, all CLSI volunteers are asked to review and to indicate that they understand and accept the attached CLSI policies. Volunteers will not be eligible to participate in any CLSI committee until this acceptance is completed, signed, and returned to CLSI. This acceptance is an integral part of the official records of consensus document development and governance committees' meetings and addresses the following core CLSI principles and practices:

- Code of Ethics
- Constituency Selection
- Standards Development Participation
- Conflicts of Interest Disclosure
- Permission to Use
- Attestation

Take note that Volunteers will be asked to sign and return a new "Acceptance of CLSI Policies" form at least every four years, and upon each new committee appointment and/or election to any new governance, standards development, or other volunteer activity on behalf of CLSI. Eligibility to assume such new or different roles in CLSI activities and/or to participate on any CLSI committee shall depend, in part, upon the return of such signed Acceptance.

I will not, without appropriate written authorization, disclose to any third party any confidential information or document to which I obtain access by virtue of my volunteer board or committee service to CLSI. If I have any doubt about whether particular information or a particular document is confidential, I will not make disclosure unless I have first clarified the situation with appropriate CLSI officials or staff and obtained written authorization.

II. Constituency Selection

All volunteers must self-select into one of three applicable constituency category interest groups: health care professions, government, or industry. In determining constituency categories, the following guidelines apply:

- Individuals employed in the field of healthcare by an academic institution, a health care delivery organization, a professional society or association, or an accreditation or certification organization are considered members of the health care professions constituency.
- Individuals employed by a publicly-funded organization, institution or agency that receives all or most of its funding from the government are considered members of the government constituency.

Setting the standard in laboratory medicine for a healthier world.

II. Constituency Selection (Continued)

- Individuals employed by a predominantly for-profit manufacturing or distribution company, or a trade association or other organization comprised substantially of such companies, and individuals whose primary work is consulting for entities in the for-profit sector, are considered members of the industry constituency.

Exceptions to the constituency descriptions above are noted as follows:

- An individual officially designated to represent a CLSI member organization in a particular constituency will be deemed in that constituency regardless of his/her primary employment; and
- Individual members, not otherwise affiliated with a CLSI member organization, will self-declare a constituency based on their primary role consistent with the guidelines for organizational members.

I declare that my constituency, based upon the definitions above, and specific for the CLSI work for which I am volunteering, is:

Professions

Government

Industry

III. Conflict of Interest Disclosure

Conflict of interest (hereafter “conflict”) disclosure is intended to help ensure transparency and unbiased decision-making by CLSI. The existence of an actual or potential conflict does not necessarily preclude board or committee service to CLSI. However, if an individual has an actual or potential conflict relating to a topic that is under discussion, the individual shall promptly identify such actual or potential conflict and explain the nature thereof. The presiding individual for the specific CLSI activity shall then determine, in his or her discretion, whether the individual’s actual or potential conflict should preclude participation in the activity, the discussion, and/or in voting on a given topic and the individual agrees to abide by that determination.

Information on disclosed actual and potential conflicts will be kept on file at the CLSI office.

In the spaces that follow (or on additional pages, if necessary), please provide the requested information when it is relevant to the field(s) of work in which you will be involved with CLSI. In determining your actual or potential conflicts, you should consider your relationships as well as those of your spouse/domestic partner, business partner, parent, child, and/or sibling (“related person(s)”) that give rise, or could give rise, to a conflict.
